“We always combine aesthetics and functionality in our LERROA brand products. The added value of the materials used goes hand in hand with the original appearance. With the RUUMI collection, we let the naturalness show in the constructions as well. A great example is rust, which can bring a unique texture, a beautiful red-brown color and an unrepeatable pattern to the interior, or raw steel, which perfectly complements industrial interiors. These designs are authentic, timeless and age gracefully.”

SURFACE MATERIALS

- we let natural materials stand out

BauBuche

BauBuche is made of beech wood from ecologically managed forests in Central Europe. The key difference between BauBuche and other laminated veneer lumber materials is the type of wood. The use of beech provides significantly higher strength and excellent surface quality. Thanks to the black bonding, BauBuche has a completely original, elegant and modern look.

Valchromat

Valchromat is made of wood fibres colored in the production process. The fibres are impregnated with organic coloring agents and chemically bound to one another by a special resin which lends Valchromat unique features. Small wood fibers are visible on the surface that did not absorb the organic dyes. This peculiarity gives Valchromat its unique and natural appearance. Valchromat combines the natural properties of wood with the beauty of colors and textures. It is colored throughout the material, which allows the cutting edge to be left without subsequent treatment.

Rezign Veneer

Rezign Veneer is a recycled veneer made of textile waste such as denim, army clothing, but also from bio-based fibers such as flax, hemp and jute coffee bags. The fibers are first shredded into small pieces, which are then combined into felt. This is finally pressed using a biodegradable binder into a hard material - veneer. Using recycled materials, different batches of clothing or bio-based fibers may have different color outcomes. Therefore, the veneer is unique and one-of-a-kind.
